

Her son was with The Ohio State University Marching Band. As a senior sousaphone player, he had been chosen by fellow musicians to dot the “i” in “Script Ohio.” His mother was in hospice care and had never seen him march. But this was a very special occasion. Thanks to the Foundation for Hospice of Central Ohio, special arrangements were made for her — including individual transport, an accompanying nurse, and specialized equipment — so she was able to attend the game and see her son perform the most celebrated role in the legendary formation. She died just two weeks later.

Providing world-class end-of-life care to the health system at
The Ohio State University
Wexner Medical Center

We are here to help

We believe everyone should have access to end-of-life care regardless of their ability to pay, complexity of care, or severity of need. To that end, Hospice of Central Ohio operates an inpatient care unit at The Ohio State University Wexner Medical Center, which is one of only five in the nation embedded within an academic medical center.

This optimally designed 12-bed center is a tranquil space for patients and families to spend quality time together while receiving world-class end-of-life care with symptom management, spiritual support, complementary therapies, and bereavement services.
